

Kevin Klungtvedt holds a B.E.E. in electrical engineering from the University of Minnesota and has been in industry over 25 years, most of which has been spent in Rushford, MN. He has been working in rural nanotechnology since 2000. He is among the original founders of the Rushford Institute for Nanotechnology, RINTek, a non-profit 501 c 3 company that was established to promote nanotechnology in the rural areas. In 2009 he started Rushford NanoElectroChemistry Company, a nanotechnology company working in biotechnology and other areas. In addition to nanotechnology, he has written 2 papers in the area of electrical contact theory.